Research question: Alain Locke, writing in 1925, called the Harlem Renaissance "a spiritual coming of age." W.E.B. Du Bois called it "a cultural weapon in the fight for civil rights." Were they describing the same thing — or fundamentally different visions of what the Renaissance was for?

ACTIVITY 1: INDEPENDENT RESEARCH

Use the library catalogue and at least two sources to find evidence for both Locke's and Du Bois's positions. Record your sources using proper citation format:

Source 1:

Evidence for Locke's view:

Source 2:

Evidence for Du Bois's view:

ACTIVITY 2: YOUR ARGUMENT

Write a 5–6 sentence analytical paragraph: were Locke and Du Bois describing the same Renaissance, or did they have fundamentally different visions? Who do you think was closer to the truth — and why? Cite your evidence.

ACTIVITY 3: EXTEND

Find one Harlem Renaissance resource in the library that most students wouldn't find easily — a less obvious entry point. What is it, and why is it valuable?
